

Dear Future Doctor,

Welcome to your Kaplan MCAT 2015 program, and congratulations on taking the next step in your journey towards a higher MCAT score and your future medical career! As you get ready to dive into your Kaplan MCAT 2015 program, we wanted to give you some instructions on what to do first and let you know what to expect in the coming weeks and months.

If you haven't already done so, you'll want to begin with the tasks on the Get Started page where you found this document. First, take a few minutes to watch the 7-minute Orientation Video. Then, set aside some time to complete your half-length MCAT Diagnostic (3 hours, 40 min) and Science Assessments (six 20-min sections). Note that your performance on these diagnostic tests will eventually inform your personalized recommendations, which will be tailored to your strengths and weaknesses.

Many of the features mentioned in the Orientation Video are already available on your online Study Plan, with additional features and assets being added as you progress through the course. For example, Kaplan's exciting new MCAT Channel will launch in early October, giving you unlimited access to live, elective instruction almost every day of the week all the way through test day.

Similarly, your personalized recommendations will be activated later in October, at which point you'll be able to view your personally recommended assignments for each class session on the Practice & Applications page. We'll continue adding more practice assignments, science review videos, full-length exams, and applications over the next few months. Rest assured that you'll have plenty of instruction and practice to work with along the way, and we've scheduled the release of additional online assets to align with your Study Plan between now and your MCAT 2015 test date in April or beyond.

Finally, in preparation for your first class session, you'll find the following "Before Class" assignment listed on the Unit 1 CARS section of your Study Plan page: Review Chapters 1 – 5 in the MCAT Critical Analysis and Reasoning book you received in your Home Study Kit.

If you have any questions, please feel free to give us a call at 1-800-KAP-TEST or email us at customer.care@kaplan.com. We look forward to helping you prepare for the new MCAT 2015 exam over the coming months!

Good luck,

The Kaplan MCAT Team
